Dear Ed,

You will remember that some time ago when you phoned me we talked about the Madeleine Brown book. You said Livingstone had published it without permission and she was thinking of suing him.

Of course that interested me because it seems rather crazy.

I spoke to Andy at The Last Hurrah and got a copy from him.

I did not speak to anyone else about that book or about having any interest in it. I was curious about it but no more. Not after what I had read that she said and not after what Livingstone had used in his own crap.

Not long after I spoke to you and to Andy I got a phone call that threatened me if I wrote anything about that book. I have a Caller ID. The call was on Livingstone's phone but not by him. I know his voice.

You or Andy or both spoke to him and that is what happened. As I think you should both know.

If I had been really concerned I'd have written you sooner. I've stayed busy with what I usually do but when I thought of this with a few minutes before supper I write.

I hope you are getting along well.

Best,

Harold Weisberg
