

1
OCT 10 1964

Nixon Blames State Dept. For Pigs Bay

NEWARK, N.J., Oct. 9 (UPI) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon charged today that a "State Department clique" and not the late President Kennedy was responsible for the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba.

Nixon also ruled himself out as a possible Cabinet member should Sen. Barry Goldwater be elected President.

Nixon spoke at a Republican breakfast rally here during a two-day campaign tour of New Jersey on behalf of the national GOP ticket.

Nixon said he was speaking out about the Cuban disaster for the first time in response to remarks made yesterday by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

"I wasn't going to bring this up, but since Rusk has thrown this into the political ring I want to speak out for the first time," Nixon said. "It has been said that the blame for Cuba lay with Dwight David Eisenhower because Castro came to power when he was President.

"Let me tell you who was responsible—the same ones who are responsible for the Bay of Pigs fiasco, who prevented air support after John F. Kennedy made the right decision by ending in troops.

"There is a clique in the State Department," he charged. "It is this clique, not John Kennedy or Eisenhower or (former Secretary of State Christian) Herter, who are responsible for this.

"This is the same clique who fought John Foster Dulles. They are more interested in what world public opinion will be instead of the welfare of the U.S."

Nixon, in a Washington news conference yesterday, suggested the Republicans were more to blame than the Democrats for communism in Cuba. He said the present Administration must find a "cure" which is "more difficult than prevention."

OCT 10 1964

Nixon Puts Cuba Blame on Clique

NEWARK, N. J. (UPI) — "It has been said that the blame for Cuba lay with Dwight David Eisenhower because Castro came to power when he was president. Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon charged Friday that a "state department clique" and not the late President John F. Kennedy was responsible for the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba.

Nixon spoke at a Republican breakfast rally here during a two-day campaign tour of New Jersey on behalf of the national GOP ticket.

Nixon said he was speaking out about the Cuban disaster for the first time in response to remarks made Thursday by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

"I wasn't going to bring this up, but since Rusk has thrown this into the political ring I want to speak out for the first time," Nixon said.

"Let me tell you who was responsible—the same ones who are responsible for the Bay of Pigs fiasco, who prevented air support after John F. Kennedy made the right decision by sending in troops.

"There is a clique in the state department," he charged. "It is this clique not John Kennedy or Eisenhower or (former Secretary of State Christian Herter) who are responsible for this.

"This is the same clique who fought John Foster Dulles. They are more interested in what world public opinion will be instead of the welfare of the U. S."