Robert R. Bowie, a veteran of the days of John Foster Dulles, will return to the State Department as Counselor, President Johnson announced in Texas yesterday.

Mr. Johnson also named Wilfred Johnson, a retired General Electric Co. official, to fill a vacancy on the Atomic Energy Commission.

Frank C. Di Luzio was promoted to the new post of Assistant Secretary of Interior for Water Pollution Control. Named Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare for Education was Paul

A. Miller, now president of West Virginia University.

Bowie, 56, a one-time Harvard Law School professor, is currently director of Harvard's Center for International Affairs and a frequent consultant to the State Department.

In that latter capacity he was one of the originators of what came to be known as the multilateral nuclear force (MLF), the controversial scheme for giving West Germany and other NATO nations a more direct role in nuclear affairs. He has suggested that such a force might some day operate without an American veto.

Policy Planner

Bowie was named by Dulles to head State's Policy Planning Staff, a post he held from 1953 to 1957. At the time of his appointment he was opposed by Republican Senators William F. Knowland (Calif.) and Styles Bridges (N.H.) on the grounds that he advocated recognition of Red China but he flatly denied that.

An act visit, Bowie traveled widely with Dulles. His new post, Counselor of the department, is that of a general handyman for the top officials. In recent years the job was combined with that of chief of the planning staff under Walt W. Rostow who has since moved to the White House. Henry Owen has been named to the Policy Planning post.

Johnson, 61, is a mechanical engineer with 35 years service with General Electric. He retired last year after 15 years as general manager of GE's atomic products operation at the AEC's Hanford, Wash., multipurpose facility, a post which won him an AEC citation. The commission has frequently had one member with an industrial background such as Johnson's.

On Manhattan Project

Di Luzio, 52, is currently director of Interior's Office of Saline Water. A civil engineer, he worked on the wartime Manhattan project making the atomic bomb. He later served as staff director of the Senate Committee as Aeronautical and Space Sciences.

Miller, 49, is a West Virginia native and a WVU graduate with a Ph.D. from Michigan State University in sociology-anthropology. He rose from instructor to provost at Michigan State and became WVU president in 1962.

Aides at WVA said yesterday that Miller has a strong pro-civil rights record including the provision of university-owned housing for Negro faculty members in all-white neighborhoods. WVU runs several African educational programs and Miller is known in international and adult education fields.

The President announced these judicial appointments:

Donald P. Lay, 39, of Omaha, Neb., to the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals. This serves Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, North Dakota, Arkansas, and Missouri.

For the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, Walter J. Cummings Jr. 50, of Chicago, and Thomas E. Fairchild, 54, of Milwaukee. This serves Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Theodore Cabot, 49, of Ft. Lauderdale, as a judge of the Southern District of Florida.
