

Sch is omniscient, machis cent, a fable virtuous, undoubtingly right and is self-righteous. He finds a peer only in Kennedy. One not in step with both is wrong, stupid, usually a always wrong, untruthful, and has any other fault not a weakness or of character or intellect that can expedient to the writing, which can always be made appropriate to Sch's in method & need. Thus when Sch was ~~doubtful~~ doubtful of U.S. did not in to disapproval (pp 524-6) and did not particularly like Kennedy's humor / what a displaying "intertit similarity with Mrs. K. to ~~the~~ ^{Sch} Sch nearly he became a hyphenate to a man "who had stayed around so long" - not did so much!
