HARRISONBURG, VIRGINIA... in plain a four-hour long & very well planned (all of which he would watch in 20' + twenty-degree weather)... "The weather was not 20" inside the shelter of the inaugural booth. But it was outside, & there were thousands of thousands who watched the parade in 20' weather, snow, blowing & hitting windows, and without. In fact, he did accounts of skin rash. It is, of course, easy & natural to get carried away, especially in writing of a man to whom one has a great dedication & has dedicated most of one's adult life. But there has been a lack of balance & perspective in your writing considerations, which should have been obvious to the writer, justifies the asking of questions. Does he do the same elsewhere, with political rather than metinological fact?
