Dear Dick,

I have mislaid my copy of your first Connally piece, the one in which Mrs. Connally is quoted on the clothing and the lack of interest in them. I'd appreciate a copy if you have one or a Xerox if you do not. The pictures are not important to the use for which I want this. Thanks.

I may be in New York toward the end of next week.

I've had a long talk with the man who was responsible for that nocturnal alarm I got when I was lost in New Orleans and about which I told you. I can now add more. I am convinced the incident was genuine. I am now inclined to believe that the business interest was by the company, not the contractor. It is not unlikely that the company wanted exactly the reaction that ensued, which would certainly direct attention at the contractor and away from the company, had the deal been consummated. It may, yet, one way or another.

There are many other little things that may or may not have pertinence but certainly are quite interesting.

Regards to Nancy.

Sincerely,
