New Orleans, La.

Dear Mr. Healy,

Please excuse the long delay in thanking you for your courtesies. My trip was extended by a successful investigation in Dallas and I returned ill and later than I had planned.

You were, really, helpful, and I do appreciate it. Access to your library is particularly valuable. Mr. Nardelle has been both kind and efficient.

I suspect that had you read some of the things I saw there, such as the eulogizing of a bomber as a man dedicated to freedom and democracy (shudder), you would not have written some of the stories that followed.

In my following up on the Cuban Power story, which is far from complete, I note the only picture not in the Miami papers is that of Morejon. Bill Delzell, who was then with the "Friends of Democratic Cuba", is still in New Orleans, I understand, and might identify "Joseph Moore" ("Oswald in New Orleans," page 101) as Morejon. However, I understand he is accomplished at lying as he and other Indians are fluent in languages.

Should there be anything you would like from my files or any questions you may have, I expect to be back in New Orleans the first week of next month.

Again, my sincere thanks.

Respectfully,

Harold Weisberg
