Dear Mr. Worthington,

Although there is no "Frederickton" in Maryland, your letter of the 20th made good time because you had the right zip.

The name you do not mention is that of Norman Similas. After Photographic Whitewash appeared I accumulated much more should it interest you, through two Canadian friends.

You'll find it all from the index. All printed, that is.

This and the other books of the series did appear years ago. Yet they are still selling regularly, with increased interest for the past six months. And they are, I believe, still basic and still entirely unchallenged. Also not superceded.

The price is $4.95 plus what postage is on the envelope, about 17¢.

If you want to follow this without seeing what I have, I suggest that you write Dr. Richard Bernabei, Department of Classics, Queens' University, Kingston, and use my name. I do not have Dick's phone.

If you kept notes when you were in Dallas, no matter how insignificant they may have seemed or how inaccurate, I would welcome a chance to go over them. By and large reporters did very well until Orwellian authority began functioning. And what is needed is a proper appreciation of both Orwell and Alice ~~in~~ Wonderland, with The Purloined Letter never forgotten.

Actually, my work and knowledge have progressed very far from what is in these books. I have obtained what was withheld from the Commission, have found and interviewed witnesses, including those not asked the right questions and those not allowed to volunteer, have traced destroyed evidence and many other things I can't go into in a letter.

I have by far the most definitive book written and can't go farther into debt to print it. It is based on evidence that was suppressed and in some cases destroyed. And, unfortunately, I also can't give it away.

However, if your duties should ever take you to Washington, we are but an hour away should you like to discuss and of these matters.

Or a surprising number of topical matters not unrelated to them.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I would be most grateful if I could get a copy of your book "Photographic Whitewash", which I believe appeared some years ago in connection with the assassination of President Kennedy. Please bill me for whatever the charges are.

I am especially interested in a rather extraordinary case of the Canadian who had his negatives disappear from a Toronto paper, The Telegram. I worked for The Telegram at that time and was in Dallas for the Oswald slaying and have never heard of this and would be interested in following it up. Any help you can give would be greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

Peter Worthington
