

UNDERHILL

Penn Jones' version of what he heard of Underhill's death was that a CIA man appeared at a New York friend of long-standing (John-Denevan) in a distraught state within days after the assassination, and told her (probably Mrs. Fitzsimmons) "I know who killed Kennedy and you have to hide me." He returned to Washington, to his home and wife within a week or two and about three months later he committed suicide. Shot himself in his home.

Underhill said that he had been in the office of the CIA and had seen some of the files for the Kennedy assassination. He said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files.

At the time of the assassination, Underhill was in the office of the CIA and was assisting a man named Murphy, who was a friend of the CIA. Underhill said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files. He said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files.

There is no doubt that he was in the office.

Underhill's last name was (Patrick O.) and his address was (Massachusetts).

The day after the assassination, Underhill went to see the CIA man's friend, Mr. Jones. Underhill said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files. He said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files.

Underhill said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files. He said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files.

There are several other people who have seen some of the files and that they have seen some of the files and that they have seen some of the files. He said that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files and that he had seen some of the files.