Dear Cindy,

As the varying pretty hues of your envelopes and notepapers are not lost upon me, so also is the end of the horoscope-which I'll continue to try to prove erroneous. Yours is the first clipping of the serialization of Curt Genrty's literary whoredom, by far the most disreputable and anti-social. When you are here again, I'll tell you that story. He was in touch, knowns better, but a buck is a buck, etc., and with this extensive serialization, without subsidy, he has it. I'll read the cutting when I can. Next time, please identify and date source. This looks like Standard. ??

You are a dear sweet woman to return to be with your mother at a time that will be so unpleasant for her. If I cannot be as proud of you as she should be, I am as pleased as I can be. You'll be welcome here, as visitor or worker or both, and if I meet your mother and you are present, I warrant you'll blush when you hear what I would say.

Jean Daniel, who was then, I think, foreign editor of "L'Express", saw JFK just before ass, then went to see Castro, with JFK's request that he return after Castro interview, was with Castro when he learned of ass. I have Daniel's New Republic articles. I'd like anything else he can provide. I regard it as significant journalism, significant history, and want to use it in "Tiger To Ride". If he agrees (and don't knowk yourself out at the cost of enjoying Paris in the Spring) to let me have anything else he has, please also ask him how he'd like it credited, write it out and attach so I can make no error. I do try, very hard, to always give credit. It may have no immediate importance to the one credited (though I think this a moral urgency), but one can never with certainty anticipate its future significance. History deserves this as, sometimes, the writer's reputation in history also does. In the Daniel case, I am without doubt. I am also certain he can say much more than I have read and were I Daniel, I would have by now.

Dear girlz, the suits are more challenging, more difficult, than you imagine. But they, too, are urgently necessary. You are in the right place to recall the phrase, "There is a tide in the affairs of men". Now the fullness of the swell should be in court. But there have been incredible obstacles and unanticipatable intrusions of the most despicable sort here. Too long and complicated to write about.

More than the usual haste - and typos - and thanks.

Best,

Dear Hal

Hello! I received your letter when I returned from a short trip to Paris. I wish I could have found you the article while I was there. But do send the information when you can. I'll try and get it if I go again. You see I may not be moving to Paris but probably returning to the States instead. My father is going to be trying to go through with a divorce and I would hate for my mother to be alone through an upsetting time like that. Enough.

I'm enclosing the only article I've come across. There doesn't seem to be too much in the papers I guess Powers has come out with a book or a series of articles. There might be something of value in his writings.

Your suits on the government are quite an undertaking. I'm sure they will throw all the red tape they can in your path. Really incredible - even confiscating the British court copies. There seems to be no limits does there?

I hope your suits will prove to be successful in obtaining the information.

If there is anything I could do here let me know. I'll keep my eye out for any newspaper articles.

Take care now and don't work too hard

Love
