Dear Harold,

You probably saw this interview with Oliver Stone, but I thought I'd send it just in case you missed it. It's a shame the film focuses on the Garrison investigation, but it sounds like it should be quite provocative, nevertheless. I suppose it's possible that the film will lead to demands for another government investigation of the assassination, but given the attention span of the American public, and the fact that a former CIA director in in the White House, I'm not getting my hopes too high.

I do want to thank you for getting me the four books I ordered. (I'm certainly glad I already owned the original "Whitaker" and "Oswald in New Orleans.") They were every bit as good as I expected. The only problem is that they are so packed with fascinating information that they will each require at least one rereading before I can begin to absorb all their content.

The five-part series "The Men Who Killed Kennedy" recently aired on the Arts and Entertainment cable TV station here in Chicago. Although there is much to praise in this work, the highlights for me were your all-too-brief appearances.

Your statement at the conclusion of the first segment was eloquent, moving, and should awaken all who view these programs to the importance of the continuing investigation of the assassination. If you can't do this, then who among us can?

Admirably,

Don Weisoff

Dear Dan,

Thanks for your letter and the clipping. I'll appreciate any more you see and if you do see more, please try to date and source them.

If the Oliver Stone movie is provocative, and from the first version of the script it is, that does not mean it is good and it can't be.

and if it should prompt another government investigation, which I doubt, that in itself at this time has no prospect of being a good investigation because like that of the House, it will not dare expose the FBI, indispensable in establishing what truth can be given government approval.

There are not many in either house of the Congress who could hope to survive being ~~real~~ really critical of the FBI.

We do not have cable and I've not seen the Nigel Turner show aired by A & E. I did see his first version, 90 minutes. I had agreed to be interviewed only with his assurance that he would not pretend to solve the case. as you know, he did not keep his word. He thus joins those who have deceived and mislead the people and confused them even more. This is not good and I think it is bad.

He and other exploiters and commercializers use people like me to give credibility to what is not credible, like his Corsicans did it "solution."

I appreciate your kind comments. Thanks for them.

I can't predict the future but to the degree possible I've prepared for it by arranging for all my work and records to be a free public archive at Local Hood College.

Thanks and best wishes,

Harold G
