

While responding to your helpful 3/13 it seemed that the time had come to practise that which makes a good defense. I have no reason to believe that Byrd of Tunney will have any interest, but I think what I sent, if as always in too great haste, might be provocative enough to get them asking and looking. If Ian does a story there may be some feedback. I actually started to write one but just got started when I had to stop. And I don't know anyone who'd use it. In addition to following your reasoning to its logical conclusion, it also seemed that the situation is about as good for that stuff as it can be...I didn't hear it, but there was a mention on the part of TV news we heard that Nixon had addressed(?) this in a press conference. Lil was delayed an hour so we missed almost all the news. I'll catch in tomorrow's papers, when I get back from Baltimore. I heard an interesting part, the challenge to take the issue to court. Meaning the court he has packed. Sorry I didn't have time for a better letter. Mailed when I went for Lil. HW 3/15/73
