Dear Cyril,

Mary thanks for the copies of the shirt-front picture. Because their exposure is different than mine, they are helpful....I'm deep in a response to a quite belated government motion to dismiss. Bud read a copy night before last and told me yesterday it depressed him (to think of the work response requires). He said that had such a paper been served where he was the attorney, he'd recommend to his client that he abandon the litigation. I, of course, will not and will use a kind of intellectual judo with it to the end, I think, that what we seek may be advanced. Six of the 10 days permitted for response passed before I got and could read it! I've asked for 30 days. The fed arty tried to trap me into assuming I had them automatically!...The judge is liberal and hung up on Warren, which makes some problems, but has been willing to clobber the FBI in court.

With DeJalma's report you avoid mention of your own opinion. For my own understanding, I have a few questions. What is, as used here, a "slow moving bullet"? the conjectured 1800-2000 rps? Please ask him that his professional opinion would be with more added conditions true, as they are:

- a) spectrographic analysis discloses no metallic traces here on the shirt or anywhere on the tie;
- b) there is no hole anywhere in the shirt, there is a slight nick, as slight as does no more than expose the the lining, on the outside front-left (the right) edge of the shirt (the FBI picture was faked to give the opposite impression, if you recall it), and there is no damage elsewhere, especially not along joints that could easily be over where these hairs would everyday (and I have pictures showing the shirt and tie, not in disarray).

I believe those hairs were caused by a windup, which also caused the tie. When the tie was cut open (which is clear from the pictures I have), I have no doubt that the anterior neck wound was above the collar.

But aside from my doubts, restricting ourselves to just this single factor and the aided foreknowledge, isn't possible for a criminal to reach a positive conclusion as to whether the hole was or could have been created by a bullet from any direction?

I have more than relates that I can't go into but will send you whatever you are here. This evidence seems impossible to front out there and is definitive on the location of the neck wound.

Well, I am still on the closed case but the new one is dead slow, also, and I have your file and the medical report. My recollection is that when I saw it I saw in it and more as a definite suggestion of fraying. Could you offer any opinion about whether the fraying test is visible in this shot as characteristic of a bullet's path? For your information, too to form his opinion, the hole in the shirt is similar to another. I have a good shot of that, which the coroner didn't, now, cover. Just popped into my mind, if I never told you, the study and the autopsy doctors were shown the same before the doctors testified. I have sides and ends like this from an unimportant source. I make and want no use, for I want the source and I want to put everything together first. And there was no damage to the X-rays then, indicating exsanguination after the shot and before panel examination. Something had to burn, remember. By the way, if I can take them, they do have to take pictures for me, which will entail my presence when they are taken, would you like to be there? Collision? Would pictures of the underpants help?

Again, many thanks to you and please convey them to Collier. Gotta get back to pretending I'm a lawyer. On the fact and the law I should win this one, with what I already have now with the possibilities presented by a very dishonest federal motion.

Sincerely,
