

October 30, 1936.

Mr. G. L. Patterson,
National Labor Relations Board,
2102 National Bank Building,
Detroit, Michigan.

Dear Pat:

I received your letter of Wednesday and agree entirely with the suggestions and opinions you embody therein.

Perhaps I did not explain to you my reason for believing Flowers should be on the stand. We have from him an affidavit swearing that he had purchased, from the time he was sworn in office until the date of the Affidavit, only $1,500.00 worth of gas. This, we know, is just about one tenth of what has been sent to him. Ergo, is being a front. My idea was that he be put on the stand and first asked to certify and vouch for his affidavit and that he then be confronted with the cold facts. My hope would be that he find talking easier after thus being confronted with proof of his effort to thwart our investigation. Of course, he would be given a chance between perjury and identifying Goodyear as the final recipient of all this gas.

You will find inclosed a copy of a letter I am sending Dairymple. If you ever get back to Akron I wish you would find out something more about our friend Yount. I am becoming more and more interested in him.

Very truly yours,

HAROLD WEISBERG.