Dear Harold:

Your letter of recent date stating that I was mentioned in a R. A. & I. spy report has been received. In accordance with your suggestion, I examined the galley proofs. The Patterson therein named does not happen to be this one. The middle initial in the report is "A" instead of "L"; hence I am deprived of the "superior luxury".

Sincerely yours,

G. L. Patterson, Regional Attorney

Dear Pat:

I am not sorry that you are deprived of the "superior luxury" of mention in the H. A. I. spy report I referred to, the fact of the matter is, I am glad.

Seriously though, Pat, here is one thing that bothers me. Although I haven't read your Goodyear brief, I have heard many favorable comments thereon. Since returning from Akron I have thought, more and more, that Jim Flower and his predecessor should be on the stand -- Flower for what he has done and is doing and the gentleman who preceded him for what he knows. I believe this honorable gentleman is cooling his heels (and other choice portions of his anatomy) in a Federal penitentiary.

Do you think that he would, or could be induced to, talk? If so, do you think this would do us any good?

The Flower subpoena, you know, arrived too late to be served, so I returned it.

In any event, I hope you will be here when the case comes up.

Yours truly,

Harold Weinberg
