Dear Dr. Post,

It is not reluctance or unwillingness that prompts my silence; it is just that for the past few months I have been so busy and my requirements so unpredictable that I could not in good faith make a commitment for fear I'd not be able to keep it. During this period I also had to turn down an invitation to go to NYU to be on a major discussion program, relinquishing that time to my "competition".

Aside from the responsibilities of a publisher I am also a writer. During the period of our correspondence I have completed a sequel, WHITEWASH II. I hope it will soon be available. Interest in it is so great we are getting unsolicited check (that we return) but have been forced to start a file of orders for it, very gratifying.

There are only two of the earlier commitment I have agreed to keep in the near future. There are those I first made.

As of now any one of the dates you selected is agreeable. May I suggest that you select the one that most suits you, with the understanding that you confirm it a week before the last time you can conveniently change it?

I hope I'll be under less pressure soon after Christmas. Of course, I cannot predict this. I also hope the reception the new book gets will keep me too busy, for it has serious purposes. I am sorry about this situation. But in an effort to cooperate, let me suggest that if you get a cancellation on one of your programs after Ames you phone me and if I can keep that one for you I will.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
