Dear Nick:

Here is the bill from my travel agency which means I told you my expenses were a little less than they actually were, but we will let it go. I had in addition approximately 100 miles of car mileage and a $5.00 parking fee.

By now perhaps you have seen the connection between the two "False Oswald" chapters in my two books and what is going on in New Orleans.

Best regards to you all.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I suspect by now you have heard from the students and Professor Berger that your day here made quite an impact. Whitewash and Whitewash II have become very timely -- conversationally if not saleswise -- and the response has been decidedly favorable to your work and interpretation. I fear you left the august Warren Commission under a dark cloud. Friday morning while you were enjoying Mohawk's fouled up service to New York, my classes would have none of Canadian History; they wanted to talk about the assassination!

I have visited the bureaucracy, and the $100.00, tax-free, honorarium should be on its way. However, the auditor would like to have a receipt for your air fare and contingent expenses, a ridiculous matter that they neglected to tell me while you were here. Thus, I will need a statement signed by you of the expenses of travel and a receipt if possible. Frankly, I am embarrassed about this.

It was our good luck that you were able to be here last week, and I think there is a good chance that you will be invited to come again next year.

Personally, I have enjoyed your books in terms of being fascinated, but they do leave one in the lamentable state of a helpless rage at Uncle Sam. Today's news about the CIA's connection with the student association has not helped the blood pressure in this respect.

As soon as I get some kind of 'auditor approved' receipt, I'll get the travel expenses sent to you.

Yours,

Nick Muller
