Dear Ed, your promotional suggestions re WW IV all good but without regard for two considerations with me: when and how I'll get the time and whether with the history I have with the underground press (perhaps better put the other way) I can feel I can justify either the time or the expense. My own view is that I can't. My situation is that without letting other matters go I also can't. And when not one has ever mentioned my earlier works - some like FREEP owe me what for me are considerable sums - what reason have I to assume that now there will be this great change or responsible handling? One man can do so much. My spending any time where I have to take the initiative, bear the cost of the books and postage, take the time from sleep or other work to write letters, seems spent less wisely this way than in any of the others in which I'd spend it. The plain and simple truth is that there are other things I also must do and I can't and won't take time for these irresponsible because they have their own pasts to live with and have a clear record on misusing anything and everything they get. In the same time I'd have a better chance with the Establishment press and I won't have time for it, either. But thanks. MW 11/12/73
