Dear Scott,

The envelope of interesting articles with your note of 6/30 here today.

Elad you wife got over her trouble so well.

I'd intended asking you something when we spoke but forgot.

We have a friend who is not a real painter but has done painting who may tackle the roof job. We'd like him to, of course.

I could go through the file and retrieve the letter in which you say how it should be done but I ask you to repeat that and to include what should be known by or kept in mind by one who is not a professional painter.

This friend lives in Towson, which is near Baltimore. If he does it he'll do it weekends.

This also means that if ~~there is~~ that is a factor in using any of the materials he should be aware of ~~it~~ that.

Aside from being a good friend he is a conscientious person and will do what he does with care.

But that kind of painting will be all new to him.

He has painted his own house and models he has made.

So, when you've the time, I'll appreciate the instructions for him.

I hope your wife continues to get along well and that the blessed event is a special blessing.

Best,

Dear Harold,

Enclosed please find various news clippings of interest. I had talked to your wife about 10 days ago and she said that you were in Johns Hopkins. I hope that you are home and feeling better. My wife had to have major surgery as she had a growth in her maxillary sinus which was causing all her nose bleeds. She is now home and is doing well. I hope you are OK and my prayers are always with you.

Sincerely,

Scott Wilson
