450 Writers and Editors Protest War Tax

Four hundred and fifty writers and editors are now participating in the Writers and Editors War Tax Protest (P.O. Box 285, 127 W. 88d St., New York 10024). "Believing that American involvement in Vietnam is morally wrong," they have pledged not to pay the proposed ten per cent income tax surcharge or any war-designated tax increase. Many have also pledged not to pay the twenty-three per cent of the current income tax being used to finance the war in Vietnam.

Of the periodicals offered by the protest group a full-page advertisement headlined "If a thousand men were not to pay their tax-bills this year," only Ramparts magazine has agreed to publish it. The New York Times, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the National Observer, Christian Science Monitor, and Boston Globe have rejected the advertisement.

Writers and editors listed in the advertisement as protesting the war tax are:
