

1-8-67 EVST
Washington Book World

The Office of the Chief of Military History, United States Army, recently published the second volume in the Army Historical Series. "The Sinews of War: Army Logistics 1775-1953" was written by James A. Huston, professor of history at Purdue University, who is on leave this year to teach at the National War College. The volume is part of a series which will incorporate works which do not fit into the present two series: the "U.S. Army in World War II" and the "U.S. Army in the Korean War." The new volume explores the evolution and the role of logistics in the history of the U.S. Army in all the manifestations of supply, transportation, evacuation and hospitalization—all the services required in both times of war and times of peace. It can be bought at the Government Printing Office for $5.75.

* * * * *
Naval Institute

The United States Naval Institute in Annapolis will publish three interesting and generously illustrated volumes this month. "Naval Review, 1967," edited by Frank Uhlig, Jr., will incorporate essays for leading authorities in the services giving critical examinations of the roles of the U.S. Navy in the contemporary world setting. "John P. Holland 1841-1914" will be a biography of the inventor of the modern submarine. Written by Richard K. Morris, associate professor of education and anthropology at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., it will trace the evolution of Holland's thought and design through failure and triumph. "Wings for the Fleet" by Rear Admiral George van Deurs (U.S. Navy retired) will explore the history of the struggle to get airplanes in the Navy, from the first feeble attempt in 1911 to the modern aircraft carrier of 1966.

* * * * *
"Whitewash" in Paperback

"Whitewash—The Report on the Warren Report" by Harold Weisberg has been published in paperback by Dell. Mr. Weisberg, who lives in Hyattstown, Md., originally published the book privately. According to Dell the "underground book" sold 13,000 copies and was the first to question the validity of the single bullet theory of the Warren Report.

* * * * *
New Miller Book

Helen Hill Miller has signed a contract with Scribner's to write a book on "The Realm of Arthur," a description of the sites in England associated with the Arthurian legend. She is the author of "Greek Horizons" and "Sicily and the Western Colonies of Greece" and is a contributor to The Star's book and editorial pages.

* * * * *
Guide to Our Libraries

Legare H. B. Obear of the Library of Congress has edited the seventh edition of "Library and Reference Facilities in the Area of the District of Columbia," which was completed in collaboration with the D.C. Library Association. It is a guide to the rich library resources, specialized and general, in the Washington metropolitan area and can be bought at the Government Printing Office for $1.

* * * * *
Our Foreign Policy

Two years of research at the Brookings Institution of Washington has resulted in "Economic Development and American Foreign Policy," by David A. Baldwin, recently published by the University of Chicago Press. Prof. Baldwin, who is now teaching government at Dartmouth College, wrote the book during his 1964-5 tenure as research fellow with the Brookings Institution. It is a study of the evolution of American foreign policy as directed to economic development of other countries, and the strategy and techniques behind American foreign aid.

* * * * *
By a G.W.U. Teacher

Linda Grant De Pauw, assistant professor of history at George Washington University, has written "The Eleventh Pillar: New York State and the Federal Constitution," published recently by Cornell University Press. It concerns the ratification struggle in New York State and the varied factors behind the final ratification. The author questions the social and economic factors and concentrates mainly on the political aims of the Federalists and Antifederalists.