

Harry Livingstone's new book/documentary

HW 9/3/92

Several weeks ago Harry phoned me for suggestions regarding what might interest him in the Archives relating to the Zapruder film. He then said he was working on a book. I urged him to study closely the frames ^{projected} at considerable enlargement and to look at them forward and backward. I told him to look particularly at the frames first added following 324 when I caught the government not printing the nine that should have followed it when printed, made from the slides LIFE made from the original. Then I told him to look for the back of the President's head and body that is in them turned toward the camera and that he would find the very back of the head intact and not a trace of blood visible on it or on the short collar, when ^{it} it would be more readily seen if there. He phoned me last night ^{to} thank me for pressing him to do that because it had been very informative and he now agrees ^{entirely} with the autopsy report and pathologist's description ^{location of} of the massive head wound.

He told me that other frames have been added and that some of these later frames do not have the sprocket-hole material and thus are not made from the original.

He says he has a contract with someone in New York for a documentary for which this is very helpful. He made no mention of the book this time.
