A source, with whom insufficient contact has been made to determine reliability, advised on July 3, 1968, that while living "among the people" at Resurrection City, in Washington, D. C., a young militant group known as the Invaders was observed.

Source advised that this group was composed of about 30 teenage Negro males from Memphis, Tennessee. This group was responsible for attacks on the tourists in the area and other acts such as taking wallets and cameras.

Source advised that the two leaders of this group and those most responsible for this activity were Larry Last Name Unknown (LNU), and Sweet Willie Wine (LNU).

Source further related that these two individuals were only further described as being from Memphis, Tennessee, who were brought to Resurrection City by the Reverend James Bevel.
