Dear friend,

It is embarrassing that I do not have copies of NEVER AGAIN! that I can send you as I had planned. I have asked for a supply at least twice and offered to pay for them without response. From my dealings with these people in the past it is not possible to know what nonresponse means. In the past it has meant that I was being ignored and it also happened that books were ordered shipped to me and I did not know that until they arrived.

I have written some of you about this with a suggestion that what I've been hearing is less efficient for both of us.

I therefore suggest that if you have not ordered the book and are not in a hurry to get it you let me know that you are willing to wait and would like me to send it when I have a supply. All but one from whom I've heard had it ordered.

If I do not heard from you I will assume that you got it locally.

By accident, and I do believe it was by accident, the index, which had been set in type was omitted. I think I have made arrangements for each of you to get a xerox of it. If this does not work and you do not get a copy and would like one, please let me know and I'll send one to you.

To make this clear, I will not send you a copy of the book unless I hear that you want me to.

I am sorry this situation developed.

Sincerely,

Harold
