Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I have just finished reading your manuscript tentatively titled THE REPORT. I congratulate you on an excellently logical and gripping presentation that, in my honest opinion, based upon more than a quarter-century editorial experience, constitutes a book that is a potential best seller.

The organization and format are superb; the facts are unassailable; the style is the genuine 20th century American idiom. I cannot imagine a reader being able to leave this book unfinished once he has begun it, and I certainly cannot imagine such a book begging for a market.

I commend it most sincerely to any progressive publisher desiring to make money and serve the public welfare at the same time.

Cordially and with best wishes for the deserved success of THE REPORT (please change the title, though!).
