Networks to Rotate Coverage This Week

The Watergate hearings this week will be covered on television on a rotating basis by the three networks, according to The Associated Press.

The American Broadcasting Company will lead off tomorrow at 10 A.M. when former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is scheduled to begin testifying.

The National Broadcasting Company will take over live coverage on Wednesday and the Columbia Broadcasting System on Thursday.

Each network, under the rotation agreement, has the right to decide whether it will carry the coverage live on any day, whether or not it is the scheduled originator.
