Orlando, Fla.

Famed trial lawyer F. Lee Bailey and millionaire promoter Glenn W. Turner were indicted by a federal grand jury yesterday on charges of mail fraud and conspiracy in the sale of distributorships for three of Turner's firms.

Named in the 28-count indictment at U.S. District court were Turner and Bailey, Glenn W. Turner Enterprises, Inc.; Dare To Be Great, Inc., and Koscot Interplanetary, Inc.

Eight officers, present or former officers, directors or salesmen for the three firms also were indicted. They are:

Harry B. Atkinson, Orlando; W. Leroy Beale Orlando; Ben U. Bunting, Maitland; Clyde C. Cobb, Maitland; Jess O. Hickman, Orlando; Carrell W. Jones, Malcolm A. Julian, Fern Park, Fla., and Hobart Wilder, Winter Park, Fla.

The Justice Department said Bailey was the attorney for Turner and Koscot, and additionally helped promote the firm.

The indictment charged all defendants with devising a scheme to defraud persons who could be induced to purchase distributorships for sale of Koscot cosmetics or of motivational self-improvement courses called "Dare To Be Great," and for using the mails to further the scheme.

Maximum penalties for conviction on each count of mail fraud is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each conspiracy count.

The Justice Department said the indictment followed an extensive investigation which showed that "golden opportunity" meetings were held for prospective purchasers and that at such times the defendants told them a distributorship could earn from $50,000 to $200,000 per year.

The indictment said that the defendants concealed some critical facts, including that Koscot cosmetics were difficult to obtain without considerable delay, that some of the "dare to be great" course materials promised were never developed, and that a high percentage of existing distributors had failed to recoup their investments.

Turner's promotions have been investigated or suspended by official papers in at least 20 states
