Dear Barry,

I did not phone back this afternoon because I knew if you were busy in the morning, with Scheherazada due everybody should have been busy.

What I'd really phoned for is to see if you can spare a copy of the Wolson affidavit reported in this morning's paper.

With that guy I'd like to read every word!

More than once, too.

I've written the White House for a set of the released transcripts. If you see an extra set kicking around, please grab it because I'm not a daily paper and they don't like me, either.

Matter of fact, I read into Nixon's appearance and manner his belief that he'll now make those 1001 nights.

Some of his words may mean this, too.

And with all those rabbits, how the hounds will run!

Every which way.

Thanks,
