

Personalities

Better Way Post 6/20/74 To Streak

The American Bar Association president's son and a Florida attorney's daughter were arrested Tuesday for streaking through a pancake house after parking their clothes in a Cadillac outside. A policeman happened to be inside, taking a pancake break. Chesterfield Smith, contacted at his office in Chicago, said that he didn't see much of a defense for his son, Chesterfield Harvey Smith, 22, a student at Florida State University. His companion was another Florida student, Jacquelyn Kibler, 21, whose father is a former member of the State Board of Regents which regulates the state university system.

No Secrets
As an interviewer, Martha

Mitchell had no trouble yesterday extracting political secrets from her subject, Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward.

"Come on," said Mrs. Mitchell, on WCBS-TV's "Pat Collins Show" which she is co-hosting this week. "You voted for Richard Nixon in 68, didn't you?"

Woodward nodded yes, while Mrs. Mitchell chortled and Carl Bernstein, the other half of the team which broke the Watergate story, protested that "It's a secret ballot, you know."

Ad Libs

Others are credited with writing their lines, but Carol Burnett and Rock Hudson proved yesterday that they can think 'em up on their feet as guests at a National Press Club luncheon before their opening Friday night at the Kennedy Center in "I Do, I Do."

"Is it true," Carol was asked, "that you are going to play Martha Mitchell in Robert Redford's film from the Bernstein-Woodward book, 'All the President's Men'?" "Oh, I would love that," she responded. "I've always wanted a phone in the can." Asked about his real name, Hudson said it was "Roy Fitzgerald." "MY real name," inserted Carol, "is Rock Hudson."

From staff reports and news dispatches