President Nixon's money-raisers collected an estimated $55 million for his re-election campaign.

Of the approximate total of $45 million that has been accounted for, almost $7.5 million came from 18 "super contributors"—arbitrarily defined here to mean gifts of more than $200,000.

Here is a listing of known large contributors. For tabular purposes, contributions made by a husband and wife are treated as if made by the husband alone.

W. Clement Stone, Chicago, chairman and chief executive officer, Combined Insurance Co. of America, $2.1 million; Richard Mellon Scaife, Pittsburgh, heir to the Mellon fortune (Gulf Oil, Mellon National Bank & Trust, Aluminum Company of America), $1 million; three milk producers' groups, ADEPT, SPACE and TAPE, that annually raise less than $100 per member for political purposes, $422,500; numerous executives of about two dozen interstate trucking firms, $308,000.

Also, Walter T. Duncan, a Texas entrepreneur whose donation was an IOU from which he was later released, $305,000; Arthur K. Watson, a director of International Business Machines and immediate past ambassador to France, $300,000; George Farkas, New York, founder of the Alexander's department store chain and husband of Ruth L.
