

Add today's note today's Anderson column on WG plea-bargaining:

I should have indicated that if he can't be depended upon to learn from other interested sources or that with axes to grind what is going on in this affair and the defense, Anderson pretty certainly could be expected to from Fiorini-Sturgis, his long-time source and I'm pretty certain the man who fed him stuff he used against O'Brien that seems to have come from O'Brien's files and from files copied in Miami during this affair. In turn, this gives Fiorini a little extra call upon Anderson and hangs Anderson up a bit more because this was a theft, because he was used in it, and because he was not manly enough or good-reporter enough to say "I was used". He did not have to identify his source to do this and he had identified Fiorini as a source and had offered to bail him. HW 12/26/72
