Dennis Levitt, reporting from Federal Court House,
Los Angeles, on Pentagon Papers trial:

Today's developments [reading in open court of Earl Silbert's memo on burglarizing of files of Ellsberg's psychiatrist] led government prosecutor, David Nissen, to speak to the press for the first time in the trial. He did this in the courtroom, informally and unannounced, and of course tape recorders were not permitted.

Nissen said that the now-released memo was one of four pages, the others of which haven't yet been released.
