

Howard, I got up early to be able to read the secret White House memos on setting up domestic intelligence only to learn what was not specified in Post reporting or any radio or TV news of which I am aware, that this is and was the reality! It also says much more about the Nixonian concept of law - I've read he first, short one only - so often enunciated by Honest John when he was AG: you write law by "interpretation. The spying on Americans to the time of the memo was "useful" to the White House, which had additional requirements. These are only part of the unreported disclosures of two short paragraphs only. So, I'm quite interested in any interpretive reporting, esp. in the NYTimes, that you may see. Thanks. HW 6/9/73
