Apologies for this having been filed so hurriedly that nothing was done about it. Not that it would have made much difference, perhaps, since all I can find is the paragraph below. Neither of us remembers what you do, Gray saying something to the effect that saying "Aye, Aye" was his greatest ambition. If he did, it could be found in the tape of his testimony, but since you say "DO NOT spend time," we won't.

From WXPost 7 Aug 73, p. 16, Meyer and Jay:

"In his testimony, Gray referred to his career in the Navy, from which he retired as a captain in 1960. 'In the Navy I was trained in, you said, 'Aye, Aye, sir,' when given an order, Gray said.

"It was the same Navy I served in . . . Captain Gray,' Talmadge replied."
