

Whether or not it should have been, that belated "I did nothing" note from Treuhaft was upsetting to me so after going over the paper and taking care of the mail instead of writing I started some cleaning up. In the course of it I found a clipping intended as a reminder. I did not forget, although I did misplace this clip (spotted in hrs and used from there). However, it does remind me of something I have marked and filed and I hope where I'll find it for when I read what I've written, something, I think a phone conversation, disclosing that long after this, after he was out of it all, Pat Gray still had a friendly relationship with those who had him hanging and turning, turning. A favor-doing relationship. Isn't it sub-human? HW 12/10/73
