Of the 19 White House aides, corporation executives and others who have pleaded guilty or been found guilty in connection with 1972 campaign violations, only five remain in jail. Three of these are Cuban-Americans.

Hunt left the federal prison camp at Allenwood, Pa., at 11:40 a.m. in the custody of two federal marshals who drove him to Washington for appearances before the U.S. District Court clerk for execution of his personal bond and the probation officer who informed him of the conditions of his release.

The U.S. Court of Appeals Friday ordered Hunt and Barker released pending disposition of their appeals. Both men have cited family reasons.

Hunt's wife was killed in a commercial airline crash in Chicago in December, 1972, and his four children have been living in suburban Washington. Barker has lost his business and his only daughter has been seeking his release.

Former White House aides John W. Dean III, Jeb S. Magruder, Egil Krogh Jr. and Frederick C. LaRue and the heads of seven corporations either pleaded or were found guilty. All are free.
