In the a.m. I will mail all the contents of your last two mailings except what is enclosed. Remarkable string of "coincidences". There is in this something I can't now explain in which I have a considerable and separate interest of which you knew nothing, those negotiable securities. A mob that specializes in this interests me. Does this one, mob maestro?...I was not, as you correctly surmised, away of the special interests in the hostelryes...Assuming J and Harold are the same, we still have only a coincidence, that men were arrested at his place. Devil's advocate would argue that were they of a mob with which he had connections, the last place he'd let them go would be his. I don't buy this for he could always argue his is a public place and he can't check the society. ~~It~~ register or Jane's on each patron who signs in or phones a reservation in. At the same time, I'd be unwilling to concede that nefarious straight criminal activity is consistent with Hunt, who really considers himself a patriot. Devil's advocate could cite French SDECE, which financed its "patriotic" activity, official intelligence, bu criminality including smuggling and dope-running. In any event, this looks like the kind of thing it is good you have an eye on, with chances against it but situation warranting watching. Really lots of coincidences and there is a limit to the number occurring naturally...When your ChiTrib is unhappy about the administration in the WG affair, my, my! Like all others, they misread the judge and the prosecutor...Quincy connection: it is easy for me to remember CE for I deal with Commission Exhibits, officially abbreviated as CEs, all the time. If I hear, you will. What you did is fine. By the way, Tiger, there was one in pre-Castro Cuba known as El Tigre, not Eduardo. Rolando Masferer, a real sadist and wholesale political murderer. Our government finally had to pick him up when he tried to stage a ludicrous hedgehopping invasion of Cuba via Haiti with a crew that couldn't take "rock-Brentanos on a listless day...Back to the Hunt Eduardo: glad you are getting death certificate. There remains much mystery about that $10,000 and the superspeedy round-trip the night of the crash, by a supposedly desolated man. This may have been his purpose, not only because of the amount but because of the attention and the obvious inferences. If all was innocent, the attention would have been justification. But nothing about is seems kosher and a shrewd friend poses an added question, could Hunt have been after something in her luggage that was not reported in the papers? They don't inventory and describe the lingerie. Or what might be with it. I think it is a very perceptive question and I wish I knew the answer. Other, non-literary things have taken and are taking much time and attention, so I've not thought of this with the care warranted. Also, this time of the year I usually can't take my headclearing morning walk, which is my free thinking time. Mountains great for that! The lawyers are also very interesting, with provocative connections... eminds me: are you familiar with Percy Foreman's mob clients out there? What I suspect is that he puts some of the boys away for the mob, which pretends to get them the best that money can buy, the boys put away not knowing that he has, indeed, been paid for. There is one case that does not return to mind clearly in the late-night, of a minor character who could not begin to afford this $200 per hour crook. Foreman put the guy's wife on and they lost the key...My boy from downstate is being paroled on the federal charge in a couple of months and will be transferred to an Ill. prison on the State charge, which I believe to be a second bum rap. Rather interesting timing, or more coincidence. Thanks kuch and best, HW
