

in, some time ago I gave you the draft of a letter I proposed sending to Bork and Jaworski, asking suggestions. I am aware that you have been busy. However, I believe it is necessary to take this step. The public-relations stunt of issuing a year-end report which serves to make a bad record look good and to paper over the bad performance convinces me that I must take this preparatory step now. So, whether or not you have or had time to make suggestions or changes, please return this to me. I think it is more important to make the move than to make it in the best possible form. You were with me when I went to Jaworski's office, saw and heard the arrogance, saw him refuse to take my name and address, saying his secretary could produce it, and in the weeks following I have heard nothing. I think that the effort to bring them to book is now needed more than before. In fact, the diligent young, who are kept on peripheral things, are putting a gloss on a hideous record and if they are aware of it, are doing nothing or can do nothing.
