PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Sept. 9 (AP)—Former President Nixon was reported still at the Palm Springs estate of Walter H. Annenberg, ambassador to Great Britain. A police source said today that officials had been told only that the Nixons would stay for an indefinite period.

The source said the Nixon party included the former President, his wife, Pat, a secretary and several Secret Service agents.

The 350-acre estate is ringed by eight-foot electrified fences and tall trees and bushes. Security guards kept newsmen away from the estate's driveway.

Mr. Nixon was a frequent guest at the estate when he was President. It has a championship golf course and an air-conditioned mansion with 38 servants.

Annenberg, 65, said to be considering resigning his ambassadorship, was reportedly en route to Los Angeles from Philadelphia.

A limousine believed to have been carrying Mr. Nixon and his wife was seen leaving his seaside villa in San Clemente about 30 minutes before President Ford announced Sunday that he had granted Mr. Nixon full pardon for any offenses he may have committed in the White House.

Ten minutes after the Ford announcement, a Nixon aide at San Clemente read news media a statement in which the former chief executive admitted that he had made "mistakes and misjudgments" in handling the scandal.

Julie Nixon Eisenhower, the Nixons' younger daughter, said later in Washington that her parents had gone to Palm Springs for a rest.

The trip was Mr. Nixon's third known venture outside his former Western White House since he resigned as President Aug. 9. The others were a drive south from San Clemente and a beach picnic about 100 miles north, both shortly after he returned to California.
