

Nigerians Attack American Embassy Over Angola Issue

NYTimes JAN 12 1976

LAGOS, Nigeria, Jan. 11 (AP)—Nigerian demonstrators protesting United States policy toward Angola broke into the grounds of the United States Embassy today, plastered slogans on windows and threw stocks and stones at the building. No injuries were reported.

The attack was part of a protest demonstration in which some 2,000 Nigerian students, university teachers, workers and others carrying anti-American placards marched four miles from Yaba on the Nigerian mainland to the embassy, on Lagos Island. After attacking the building, they were persuaded to leave by the police.

There were similar attacks last week on the United States Consulate in the northern city of Kaduna and on the United States Information Service's office in the Western State capital of Ibadan.

The demonstrations began after the Nigerian Government in a statement a week ago, rejected an American suggestion that African leaders should insist on the withdrawal of Soviet and Cuban personnel from Angola as a condition for the withdrawal of South African forces. The suggestion was made in a letter to African heads of state from President Ford. The letter was published here.

Nigeria is a supporter of the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which is fighting two Western-backed factions in Angola.

11 Nigerians Killed

LAGOS, Jan. 11 (Reuters)—The Nigerian Government said that 11 people were killed by a military attack on a Nigerian laborers' camp in Equatorial Guinea Thursday.

A Government statement last night said that armed forces had attacked Nigerian nationals on the grounds of the Nigerian Embassy in Malabo.

The statement said that the incident was "the worst to date in the unbroken chain of provocation and humiliation meted out to Nigerians in Equatorial Guinea."
