

House Spy Unit Gets Crisis Data With Order to Keep Them Secret

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—material from the National Security Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency, which, he said, White House officials said could not be made public. He said the question of making it public would be "negotiated" later.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Representative Otis G. Pike, chairman of the House Select Committee on Intelligence, said late today that the Ford Administration was delivering materials in response to a committee subpoena, but under the condition that the documents not be made public.

Earlier today, in a special meeting, the House committee voted to subpoena briefing papers given to Presidents Johnson and Nixon on four major international crises during their Presidencies. Included were the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, the 1968 Tet offensive in South Vietnam, the 1974 Turkish invasion of Cyprus and last year's military coup in Portugal.

After a series of negotiations between Mr. Pike and White House officials, the Administration tonight began to deliver material relating to the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. Originally, Mr. Pike said, he had been promised unclassified material. Instead, he said, the Administration has sent him secret material from the National Security Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency, which, he said, White House officials said could not be made public. He said the question of making it public would be "negotiated" later.

Meanwhile, Mr. Pike said, he planned to begin hearings tomorrow on American intelligence on the Arab-Israeli war. "These materials will not be read at the hearing, but questions will be based upon them," said Mr. Pike, Democrat of Suffolk.

The House committee has consistently bristled at the effort by the Administration to have matters handled in secret. The House hearings are expected to examine the question of whether the intelligence estimates made by the various agencies were accurate and enabled the Presidents to properly respond to the crises with which they were faced. These are the second set of public hearings conducted by Mr. Pike's committee.
