Washington

The White House yesterday announced the appointment of Dr. Robert Goldwin as a special consultant "to help assure the flow of information, ideas and suggestions to President Ford, especially from individuals outside the government."

Goldwin was Dean of St. John's College, a private institution in Annapolis, Md., from 1969 until 1973, when he became special adviser to Donald Rumsfeld, then U.S. Ambassador to NATO and now White House chief of staff.
