The pair agreed that the FBI probably wouldn't drop its investigation of the murder even after the Warren commission had made public its findings in an official report. But, said one of the men, "We have more money at our disposal now than at any other time."

Next Time
The men were also understood to say that the "next meeting" would be at the Townhouse Motor Hotel in Kansas City, where those attending the meeting would register under the name of a textile firm.

During the entire conversation a third man was watching the pair of "conspirators" and himself, the Winnipeg man said.

This third man, about six feet tall and heavy set, was sitting by himself, but suddenly got up and cast a long, penetrating glance at the talkative pair sitting next to him.

Suddenly, they changed the topic of their conversation from the Kennedy assassination to something completely unrelated. The Winnipeg man found the atmosphere "too hot" and ran out of the bar, looking for the airport police officer.

But on his way to the stairs, he found the husky "third man" obstructing his path. He turned around and made for the nearest telephone. He was in the process of dialing the RCMP when he again noticed the "third man" directly behind him.

This time he ran out of the airport, jumped into his car and headed downtown. He contacted the RCMP later.

...son as the New Orleans man... he... announced... that... to prove a plot to... Kennedy origin... New Orleans and bits... of Mr. Garrison's... started to come out... the local man... apprehensive.

On the one hand, he felt Mr. Garrison should know what happened in Winnipeg three years ago. But on the other, he is worried about his and his family's safety.

Referring to the long list of mysterious deaths of people whose names were at one time or another mentioned in connection with Oswald or Dallas night club owner Jack Ruby, he says, "I don't want to be number 16 or 17 on the list."

But he feels it is his duty to give the New Orleans authorities whatever information he can. "Everything I heard and saw is falling into place with what's happening there."

He clearly remembers the strange goings-on at the airport three years ago.

While waiting for a business appointment in the airport cocktail lounge he heard two men discussing the Kennedy murder and started listening in. One of the men fitted the description of Ferrie, the other had his back to him. Both men wore light clothing no Winnipegger would wear in the middle of February and one of them had an accent.

He overheard the man whom he now says was Mr. Ferrie, point to a small, 10-seat plane parked outside the terminal and say, "That's the kind of plane I flew."

Small Plane

He also heard the pair express their amazement that a certain Mr. Isaacs had become mixed up with a "psycho like Oswald." Isaacs had apparently been filmed at the Dallas airport without his knowledge and now another man by the name of Hoffman or Hockman, was supposed to relieve Isaacs and get rid of Isaacs' car.
