Talks Continue On Refugee Return

Negotiations between the United Nations and the South Vietnamese government over refugees who want to return to South Vietnam are proceeding favorably, the head of President Ford's interagency refugee task force said yesterday.

Julia Vadela Taft said that when forever task force head L. Dean Brown testified before a congressional committee last week that the South Vietnamese government was being obstructionist about the return of refugees, he apparently was unaware of the progress being made in negotiations.

"When (Brown) gave his testimony, we had not heard of any positive response to the U.N. high commissioner on refugees about the matter," she said since then, she said, U.N. commissioner Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan has said Provisional Revolutionary Government authorities are cooperating "and would welcome the return of those who left their country."

An estimated 1,000 Indochina refugees have indicated a desire to return to their homelands.
