The officer, First Lieut. Delbert R. Seamans Jr.

Lieutenant Terrill, a 24-yearold native of Charlevoix, Mich., said at a news conference that "I expected that there would have been quite an uproar" over the General Lavelle incident among his fellow officers.

" Need to 'Speak Out"

"I waited," he said, "and I just feel that any oath of alle-giance requires that I at last speak out."

The lieutenant specifically accused General Lavelle of having willfully disobeyed a lawful order and falsified official documents, criminal actions that carry maximum penalties upon conviction of a total of six years in jail and immediate dismissal from the service.

Orders for 20 Raids

General Lavelle, whose nomination for retirement as a three-star general is pending before the Senate Armed Services Committee, acknowledged during a House of Representatives hearing last week that he had ordered "in the neighborhood" of 20 unauthorized raids on North Vietnam between Nov. 8, 1971, and March 8 of this year.

The general said he had officially reported the raids as "protective reaction." He also testified that General Abramsas head of the Military As-sistance Command-Vietnam in Saigon, was aware of the unauthorized raids.

General Lavelle was relieved of his four-star command in March and later reduced one rank, a demotion unprecedented in recent United States military history. He was permitted, however, to retire in April while drawing the pay of a full general-some $2,250 a
