3 1971 All Units Get 'Fact Sheet'

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 2-The Army, defending itself against public outcry against the trial and conviction of First Lieut. William L. Calley Jr., said today that it had "a moral and legal obligation" to prosecute

The defense was contained in an unusual four-page "fact sheet" that was prepared after the conviction Monday of Lieutenant Calley and mailed today to every Army unit in the

According to the document, which was described as a "white paper" by officers at the Pentagon, the United States was obliged under the Geneva conventions on rules of war to prosecute Lieutenant Calley and the others accused of wrongdoing at Mylai or of covering up the events in the South Vietnamese hamlet on March 16, 1968.

The document noted that, of the 13 original defendants involved in the Mylai deaths, two had been found innocent in courts-martial, charges had been dismissed against eight, and Lieutenant Calley alone had been convicted so far.

In what appeared to be an attempt to counter public complaints, in a flood of telegrams to the President, members of Congress and the Pentagon, that the Army was making a "scape-

Continued on Page 14, Column 6

TRIAL OF CALLEY IS BACKED BY A

Continued From Page 1, Col. 6

goat" of the officer, the statement said that "in all these ment said that "in all these on the rules of war, including on the rules of war, including those adopted in 1949, had been ratified by the United dence supported.

Calley," it continued, "we had preme law of the land." a noverwhelming body of evidence."

The Army's chief of informa-The Army's chief of information, Maj. Gen. Winant Sidle, lations, "cannot be abandoned insisted after word of the dea insisted, after word of the document leaked out of the Pentagon, that it was not intended as a public defense of the Army's position in the current controversy.

Denies Link to Outcry

phone interview, that the docu-in 1969 by a former soldier, ment was unrelated to the out-Ronald L. Ridenhour, the docucry against Lieutenant Calley's ment said, "the Army had only conviction.

troops something," he said, to prosecute the accused, if the explain "how things have gone evidence so warranted." so far, why they have, and what's still to go.

fendants still are awaiting to adopt a continuing policy of trial. They are Capt. Ernest L. investigating fully all substan-Medina, who was Lieutenant tive allegations of violations of Calley's superior, and Capt. the laws of war involving Eugene M. Kotouc. The Army American personnel. is also prosecuting Col. Oran K. Henderson on charges that he duct on the battlefield-regardattempted to cover up the less of the rank of position of Mylai incident and that he the person purportedly responlater lied about his action to a sible-must be thoroughly exspecial Pentagon panel investi-plored," the statement said. gating the incident.

office and the Army's Judge Brig. Gen. George H. Young Jr., Advocate General had "dis-were among those who were cussed vaguely in the past" the accused originally of having atpossibility of issuing a state-tempted to prevent a public ment on Mylai to field com-disclosure of the Mylai events. manders, so that they might Gen. William C. Westmoreland, inform their troops of the is- the Army Chief of Staff, has sues and facts involved.

conviction of Lieutenant Calley nal charges against them have and later the subsequent con-been dropped.

troversy "may have pushed it along a bit."

"Even though the legal action was painful and difficult,' document said, "the Army would have failed to meet its obligation to the laws of our nation had it not acted."

The Army paper said that the Geneva and Hague Conventions States and accordingly had to "In the case of Lieutenant be regarded as patr of the "su-

> The Geneva conventions, including the obligation to bring to trial individuals alleged to and adopted again at will by United States armed forces, depending upon the character of the conflict or the nonobservance of the convention by the enemy," it said.

When the allegations about General Sidle said, in a tele- the Mylai incident were made one legal course of action-to "We felt we had to give the investigate the allegations and

The document also said that the Army was aware it had Two of the 13 original de- "a moral and legal obligation

"Every allegation of miscon-ting the incident.

General Sidle said that his Gen. Samuel W. Koster and recommended that the two gen-But he also said that the erals be demoted, but the crimi-