

Clipping on next to last page of separate 42-page section on the economy of Africa, with TV and radio listings; p. 85, total paper, 84 pp.

JAN 31 1972

THE NEW YORK TIMES,

Wounded Jetliner Hijacker to Be Arraigned Today

By ROBERT D. McFADDEN

Garrett Brock Trapnell, the hijacker of a Los Angeles-to-New York jet who was shot and captured at Kennedy International Airport on Saturday, is scheduled to be arraigned today on an air-piracy charge before a United States magistrate in Brooklyn today.

The charge, upon conviction, carries a penalty ranging from 20 years in prison to death.

Trapnell, who is 34 years old today, wore a plaster cast on his right arm to conceal the automatic pistol used in the hijacking. Yesterday he wore a cast on his left arm after being treated at Queens General Hospital for gunshot wounds of the hand and upper arm.

He was shot by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who was posing as a fresh crew member boarding the hijacked Trans World Airlines 707 jetliner on the airport's southern reaches for an intended flight to Dallas, Tex.

An Eight-Hour Attempt

The shooting ended an eight-hour drama in which the hijacker had imperiled 101 lives on the airliner and had recited a long and frequently changing list of demands for cash, asylum in foreign countries, clemency, the release of a friend in jail and talks with President Nixon, two Miami lawyers and a Dallas psychiatrist.

Trapnell was transferred from Queens General Hospital to Bellevue on Saturday night, and to Bellevue's prison ward yesterday afternoon. He was being guarded there by three F.B.I. agents.

His condition was described as physically good and mentally alert, but a series of mental tests were administered last night by Bellevue psychiatrists to determine whether physical restraints would be required at the arraignment.

Authorities said the hijacker's history included psychiatric treatment in nine hospitals, three escapes and a variety of arrests for bank robbery, kidnapping and airplane theft.

His Movements Traced

The F.B.I. yesterday was attempting to trace Trapnell's movements over the last few months. His parents in Miami, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Zang, had not known of his recent whereabouts, according to Nathaniel L. Barone Jr., a Miami lawyer who said yesterday that he probably would represent the hijacker.

Another Miami lawyer, Stuart Markus, said he had been asked by Trapnell, through a message passed on by the F.B.I., to represent him, but had not decided whether to do so.

Both Mr. Madkus and Mr. Barone had talked by radio-telephone with Trapnell during the hijacking attempt, as did Dr. David G. Hubbard, a psychiatrist who had treated the hijacker and has written a book called "The Skyjacker."

Mr. Barone, who flew to Kennedy at Trapnell's request during the hijacking attempt, was back in Miami yesterday.

A spokesman for Trans World Airlines, commenting yesterday on the fact that no metal-detection device had been used to scan passengers boarding the hijacked flight in Los Angeles, said that such measures were used on a majority of flights selected on a random basis.

The devices, known as magnetometers, are used mostly in conjunction with the so-called "hijacker profile" developed by the Federal Aviation Administration to identify possible hijackers.