DENVER, Colo. AP - Dita Davis Beard, the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. lobbyist who purportedly wrote a memo linking an ITT political contribution with settlement of an antitrust case against the firm, was in Denver hospital Saturday. Her physician said she was seriously ill with a heart condition.

Two FBI agents, who Garland said had not been permitted to see Mrs. Beard, waited outside the patient's room, but apparently had not served Mrs. Beard with a subpoena issued by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee is holding a special hearing into allegations that ITT received a favorable out-of-court settlement of a Justice Department antitrust action against it after it pledged $400,000 for the Republican National Convention in San Diego next August.

Richard G. Kleindienst, nominee for attorney general, appeared before the committee last week to deny that he knew of any connection between the settlement and contribution.

Garland, who said he had not spoken with Mrs. Beard in depth about the hearing, said, "Her hope and one of the problems in her mind is that she wanted to get back to Washington."

Two FBI agents waited outside the patient's room late into Saturday night. They then were allowed to serve Mrs. Beard with a subpoena ordering her to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee at 10:30 a.m. EST Tuesday.

Liszka said it was "obvious" that the order could not be met unless her condition improves, "and this would be a miracle."
