Identification of Chief Engineer On Mayaguez

In a news story about the rescued Mayaguez that appeared in The Chronicle last Wednesday, crew member Albert Minichiello inadvertently was identified as the ship's chief engineer.

The chief engineer during the freighter's recent voyage was Clifford Harrington, according to a spokesman for Sea-Land, the ship's owner. Minichiello, who has served as a chief engineer during his 30 years at sea, was an assistant engineer on watch and running the Mayaguez at the time she was stopped by the Cambodians.
