Dear Dr. Abbott:

Enclosed is a reproduction of a clipping from the States-Item which easily could have been overlooked and which you should have. It may mean nothing at all, of course, but the connections involved suggest otherwise, as does the date. One is tempted, of course, to interpret this as some sort of signal which could have accounted for such anomalies as the difference between what Alcock said would be proved when he was speaking early during jury selection, and what the DA actually put into his opening statement. The one we noted was the connection with Jack Ruby. The big question, of course, is whether this man's time as a clerk in the coroner's office coincided with the Ferrie case and/or that of Robert Perrin.

Your newsletter continues to be most rewarding and we enclose another small contribution to help out. We are particularly grateful for your textual material and for the orderly, chronological account by Art Kevin.

The last issue we have received was dated Feb. 7, and I am moved to ask if we've missed an issue because Jim Eason was talking about a new issue the other day. Anyone at the wrong end of the alphabet is accustomed to being at the tail end of mailing lists, but I'm wondering if we've missed an issue. Eason, by the way, makes excellent use of your material. He's apparently the last of the talk jockeys hereabout who still venture to discuss the case.

With very best wishes,

James D. White
